"Murder and acts of terrorism," he added, "are the only weapons left to Russia after its betrayal into the hands of the Germans by the Bolsheviki. "With such objects in view the government of the United States is now coöperating with the governments of France and Great Britain in the neighborhood of Murmansk and Archangel. The United States and Japan are the only powers which are just now in a position to act in Siberia in sufficient force to accomplish even such modest objects as those that have been outlined. The government of the United States has, therefore, proposed to the government of Japan that each of the two governments send a force of a few thousand men to Vladivostok, with the purpose of coöperating as a single force in the occupation of Vladivostok and in safeguarding, so far as it may the country to the rear of the westward moving Czecho-Slovaks, and the Japanese government has consented.

according to a cable message received here to-day. The declaration follows:

"The Japanese government, actuated by sentiments of sincere friendship toward the Russian people, have always entertained most sanguine hopes of the speedy reestablishment of order in Russia, and of the healthy, untrammelled development of her national life.

"Abundant proof, however, is now afforded that the Central European empires, taking advantage of the defenceless and chaotic condition in which Russia has momentarily been placed, are consolidating their hold on that country, and are steadily extending their activities to Russia's Eastern possessions. They have persistently interfered with the passage of Czecho-Slovak troops through Siberia. In the forces now opposing these valiant troops, Germans and Austro-Hungarian prisoners are freely enlisted, and they practically assume a position of command.

"The government of the United States, equally sensible of the gravity of the situation, recently approached the Japanese government with proposals for the early dispatch of troops to relieve the pressure weighing upon the Czecho-Slovak forces. The Japanese government, being anxious to fall in with the desire of the American government, have decided to proceed at once to make disposition of suitable forces for the proposed mission, and a certain number of these troops will be sent forthwith to Vladivostok.

Not Seeking Territory "In adopting this course the Japanese government remain constant in their desire to promote relations of enduring friendship, and they reaffirm their avowed policy of respecting the territorial integrity of Russia and of abstaining from all interference in her internal politics.

They do not seem to plan a campaign west of the Volga, but they are reaching out on the line of the Volga both to the north and to the south. Everywhere they come the Bolshevik rule is overthrown, and those elements among the Russians friendly to the Allies assume control of local affairs. By withholding supplies from Moscow and Petrograd and other cities of Northern Russia the Czecho-Slovaks are making the position of the Bolsheviki untenable.
